CONGRESSIONAL PARTY DELIGHTED

although the channel was a little rough, none of the passenger on the Kinau suffered severely from sea sickness in either direction, and the great majority escaped without any illness at all. Not one was sufficiently sick not to enjoy almost everything connected with the journey.

Almost without exception the trip was novel in every way to the party.
The beautiful views of the mountainous Island of Kauai as seen from shipboard with the exquisite coloring and blending of lights and shadows, and changing cloud effects, delighted the aesthetic faculties of the visitors, as did also more intimate acquaintance with the Island after the landing had been made.

From first to last there was novelty in every step of the trip, and as a result no one thing paled in interest.

Most of the party were tired when they reached Honolulu, but their interest and enthusiasm remained unabated.

The Kinau did not get away from the Inter-Island wharf on Friday night until about 10 o'clock, and it was midnight before the high spirits of the crowd were exhausted, and the members had sought their state rooms.

During the trip over the island, the party was accompanied by Senator Knudsen and Representatives Silva and Coney, of the Kauai delegation in the last Legislature, and they were met at Lihue, by Representative Charles A.
Rice another member; and no pains were spared by these gentlemen to have their guests enjoy themselves in every manner within their power while on the island. The other members of the legislature, as well as other persons in the committee who accompanied the party, ably seconded these gentlemen in their efforts.

Most of the party were up on Saturday shortly after six o'clock and were out on deck enjoying the fresh air of a perfect Hawaiian morning and the beautiful panorama of the mountains and shore of the northeast coast of Kauai. Everybody was in the best of spirits.

Hanalei was reached about 7:30 o'clock and shortly after 8, everybody had been landed on the splendid beach at the entrance of the valley, where they were given a warm welcome by the people of the neighborhood, and were then escorted to the summer home of A. S. Wilcox, where Mr. and Mrs.
Wilcox, Misses Wilcox and a number of other residents of Lihue, who had driven across the island the day before as well as many citizens from miles around the valley, joined in extending greetings. Fragrant leis of mokiama were placed about their necks by a number of beautiful girls, and soon afterwards the whole party was seated at a long table spread on the spacious lanai and served with a most tempting breakfast. Everything, from the extensive variety of fruits served, to the mullet fresh caught from the sea, the delicious beefsteak, and the fragrant coffee, were Hawaiian products, and to say that they were enjoyed would be putting it mildly.

During the meal a glee club and chorus of women's voices delighted the visitors with beautifully rendered Hawa-ian songs, and the enthusiastic applause, the appreciation with which the music was received.

At the conclusion of the breakfast Mr. Wilcox in a short address again assured his distinguished guests of the appreciation which was felt in their visit, not only by himself, but by the entire population of the Garden Island as well.

Congressman Hamilton, responded to the address of welcome, in a short speech in which he expressed the thanks of himself and colleagues, and complimented their entertainers in glowing terms.

In anticipation of their coming Mr.
Wilcox had had his handsome place handsomely decorated with flags, flowers and green foliage. Over the entrance the happy word "Aloha" was outlined in colored leaves.

After the breakfast but a brief time was spent at Hanalei, in which however Delegate Kuhio delivered an address in Hawaiian to the group of native residents gathered on the lawn, and Representative Fitzgerald of Brooklyn N. Y. and Representative Webb, of North Carolina, were introduced as Democratic curiosities, they being the only members of that party in the delegation. Mr. Fitzgerald made a speech and was enthusiastically applauded by the Home Rulers in the crowd who seemed to be in the majority.

By 10 o'clock the party was all on board the Kinau once more and with parting "aloha" ringing in their ears from their entertainers on the beach, the journey around to Elelele was continued. From a scenic standpoint, this portion of the trip was probably the most impressive of all. The vessel steamed as close in as possible under the tremendous and fantastically shaped cliffs known as Napali, and the Congressional party was treated to a view that escapes most tourists, and even residents of the Territory, for the reason that vessels only pass on this side of the island on special occasions.

Besides being much impressed by the west coast of the island and the members were much interested in bits of old time tradition and superstition which has always attached to this part of the island, which were told them by Hawaiians in the party. The many legends which have been handed down from earliest times, which have doubtless been occasioned by the awe inspired in the native mind by the inaccessibility and awful grandeur of the region, have greatly enriched the folk lore of the Territory.

Past the famous "barking sands" on the south coast of the island, and the broad acres of sugar lands of the Gay plantation, the Kinau steamed with her interested passengers, who made short shift of luncheon in order that they might not miss any of the superb views until Elelele was reached about 1:30 o'clock. The arrival at this point was about half an hour earlier than the residents had been given to expect, but everything was in readiness for their reception and they were given a most cordial welcome. Fruits and food drinks were served, and within half an hour the party had boarded a train made up of sugar cars which had been covered with awnings and fitted with seats and gaily decorated with foliage and bunting, and was steaming away through the great stretch of sugar lands comprising the McBryde plantation on the plantation railroad. This ride of ten miles to Koloa was one of the most memorable of the trip, the views from the train being very fine, while the road itself, from the master-ly manner of its construction and the engineering difficulties which had been surmounted in its construction, appealed strongly to many of the visitors.
Through this part of the trip the party was in charge of a reception committee headed by Supervisor W. D. Mc-Bryde.

At Koloa the party found carriages awaiting them, and in a few minutes they were whirling away over a fine but dusty road for another ten miles to Lihue. Before leaving Koloa the party was driven to the beautiful home of J. K. Farley, where a brief reception was held and more refreshments served.
As in other places passed through, the grounds and residence of the Farley home were handsomely decorated, and the visitors were showered with expressions of the sincerest good will.

Lihue was reached about 5 o'clock, and the party was driven at once to the home of W. H. Rice where they were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Rice and other citizens of the place, and were then given an hour in which to remove some of the remarkable red soil of Kauai which they had accumulated in the form of dust on the drive. Collars and linen had been soiled by dust but no one heeded it and everybody declared the drive one of the most pleasant experiences of the day. Much fun was furnished the other members of the party by General Keifer, whose venerable white beard had changed to a ruddy auburn, and which he was unable to entirely restore to its normal color by the use of soap and water. The General seemed proud of his changed appearance, and talked of taking home a good supply of Kauai dust for future use.

The luau served at the Rice home was the big event of the trip, and to say that it was enjoyed would be putting the facts in their very mildest form. It was the first entertainment of the kind that any of the party had experienced and it was a delightful novelty. Every thing served was in regular luau style, only a few modifications being made in the manner of serving. The menu was a most elaborate one and contained in great variety the best of the food products of the Territory. While most of the dishes were entirely new to the visitors, everybody was anxious to try everything set before them, with the result that few of them had dined so well, or enjoyed a meal so thoroughly in many a day.

At the close of the luau a brief speech was made in Hawaiian by Mr.
Rice the genial host, which was interpreted by Senator W. O. Smith.
General Keifer responded to the kind welcome extended by Mr. Rice, in a brief address in which he paid high compliment to the Hawaiian people in general and the Kauai citizens in particular praise to the beauty, grace and that the delegation would never forget their visit to the Garden Island, and that their reception would always remain a pleasant memory. He paid par-
hospitality of the Hawaiian women he had met, and other members of the party applauded their heartiest approval.

The formal general reception of the day by the people of Kauai took place about 8 o'clock at the public hall of Lihue. Here the delegation met several hundred of the Garden Island's people, who, impressed by every word and action the sincere pleasure and appreciation which they took in the visit.

The hall had been beautifully decorated for the occasion and a band stationed on the lawn played splendid music at intervals during the evening.
Other music in the form of typical Hawa-ian songs rendered by quartettes of young ladies and men, also much pleased the members. In fact the music in various forms which greeted them at every point in their trip was a never failing source of delight, and the comparisons invariably made with music of similar occasions on the mainland, was not at all complimentary to the musical ability of the people of the States. To those of the Hawaiians who have not been to the coast, this praise may have seemed to have been highly colored by a desire to please, on the part of the visitors, but its sincerity was recognized and appreciated by those who have had the opportunity of comparing the musical talents of the two sections.

The address of welcome was given by Joseph Opili, on behalf of the citizens of Lihue and of Kauai in general, and was responded to by Representative Fitzgerald. Mr. Fitzgerald in a brief address eloquently thanked the people of Kauai and of Lihue for the warm welcome which had been accorded them.
The impression made on his mind and he voiced the sentiments of his colleagues as well—he said had been lasting. That Hawaii is a part and parcel of the American, everyone has known in a mechanical sort of way, but to them who have been entertained as the Territory's guests, the bond between the islands and the mainland must ever be a very real thing, and one which will never permit anything concerning the island to be considered lightly or without the most sympathetic understanding. He concluded his address by expressing for himself and the rest of the party, his sincerest and most heartfelt aloha.

Representative Hamilton called Prince Kuhio's name, and a storm of applause greeted it, and as the popular Delegate to Congress mounted the platform and again as he was leaving it, the hall rang with the chorus "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," sung with a zest that left no doubt that the Prince is popular in Washington.

The Prince's address was in Hawa-ian, and greatly pleased his listeners.
He explained that the Washington delegation had been invited to Hawaii in order that they might see for themselves the beauties of the Paradise of the Pacific, and at the same time learn that its people are good Americans, and by meeting them learn to understand their needs and appreciate their difficulties which will come up in one form or the other in the future.

Representative C. A. Rice, the Territorial Financier and leader of the lower House of the last Legislature, was called upon and made a very short address in which he expressed the hope which was only too evident in fact, that the visitors had had a good time, and would continue to have during the remainder of their visit. He also trusted that Kauai would not be forgotten and the visitors had as much pleasure out of their visit as the citizens of Kauai had had in entertaining them.

Secretary Atkinson was called upon, and the few appropriate remarks made by him met with the enthusiastic applause and he was like Kuhio, honored with the "Jolly Good Fellow" song.

In spite of the fact that the party without exception had eaten almost beyond their capacity at the luau a short time before, they were served with wines and punches, and sherberts and creams, and cakes and some found room for more.

A few minutes of dancing by some of the young people, after the formal reception, and the party hurried to another plantation train and left Lihue about 10 o'clock decorated with leis and followed by the alohas of their entertainers, to board the Kinau at Hana-maulu, whither the vessel had preceded after the party had left it at Elelele.
Although the water was a little rough the boarding was effected without great difficulty, and the happy but tired party were soon in their berths, and the staunch little vessel, speeding once more toward Honolulu.

ANCIENT MARINER CRUSHES MUTINY

CAPTAIN LARSEN OF SHIP MARI-ON CHILCOTT STANDS OFF SAIL-ORS MAD WITH DRINK.

Captain Larsen of the ship Marion Chilcott has a belaying-pin handy for any drunken sailor or other man who goes aboard with the impression that he may run the ship as he likes.

On Friday night last several of the crew returned to the ship more or less excited by liquor. One man in particular undertook to call the captain a long list of horrible names, none of which were true and all of which were violations of the rules of politeness.

In addition to the insults, the sailor ventured to lay hands on the master of the vessel, remarking that if it was not for the skipper's age he would shove his head down his throat.

Captain Larsen, some three score years of age, stepped to the side and lovingly fingered a belaying pin.

"Belay that foul chin music or I'll belay you," said Larsen, in effect.
The sailor, nevertheless, approached and moved to strike the captain, whereupon the master tapped him a smart rap on the headpiece with the pin and the sailorman took a tumble.

Others were following in the wake of the trouble-maker, but the undaunted captain gathered another belaying-pin in his left hand, and double armed, sailed into the crazed bunch of mutineers, right and left.

"You have raised a bruise on my head, that's evidence," cried one coward. "Here's another to keep it company," chuckled the skipper, laying a ridel mark alongside the first scar:
"Want any more?"

Alone and unarmed, although assistance arrived after it was all over, Captain Larsen held the ship against half a dozen toughs half mad with drink.

The men were arrested and taken to jail but later released, the Sailors' Union taking up the matter with a view to dealing with the mutineers, if so they prove to be, in a manner in which they are not likely soon to forget.

Miss Mary Schlemmer takes up musical studies on the mainland and Miss Otilie Schlemmer goes to school in this city. Miss Gertrude Schlemmer also being in Honolulu.

Captain Schlemmer said today that it was on account of freight rates being
